PEOPLE OF SANTANDER MAKE GIFT TO KING

Magdalena Furnished to Suit His Tastes.

ING ALFONSO and his court will be at Santander to-mor-row, Thursday, June 26, for the purpose of taking over from that city the presentation of its gift of the beautiful palace and park of Magdalena, fully furnished according to the tastes and wishes of his consort and of himself. It is a gift which is cal-culated to prove a very profitable investment to Santander, since it cannot fall to have the effect of attract-ing thither during the summer the various members of the government and the dignitaries of the court, as well as those members of the aristocracy and of society who love to bask in the sunshine of royalty.

The people of Santander first hecame imbuel with the idea through the frequency of King Alfonso's visits, through his manifest liking ough his manifest liking for the and its inhabitants, and, above all, by his delight in the regattas which are among the most popular features of the place. Of late years these maritime sports, invariably sailing his own boat. dering Santander quite as important as the headquarters of yachting in Spain, as Cowes is in Great Britain, and Kiel is in Germany.

Santander has been on many occa-sions the object of royal favor, since Emperor Charles V. landed there in 1522 to take possession of the throne of Spain, and since the ill-fated on his return home with Duke 'Steenie," of Buckingham, after his fruitless and somewhat romantic trip to Madrid in search of a royal wife. And it has been the recipient of many queer prerogatives and privileges. About eighteen years ago the lower part of the city was almost entirely destroyed, through the explosion of the steamer Cabo Matichaco, laden with 1,700 cases of dynamite. The harbor, or rather bay, is much more spacious and finer than that of San

Christina built it when the King was in his childhood and his sisters quite young girls. Even then it was necessary to lodge most of the dignitaries of the royal household in hotels and private houses leased for the purpose in the town of San Sebas-tian. Now that King Alfonso has several children of his own, the fifth hav-ing been born last week at La Granja, Miramar has become much too small for the royal family, especially when the party is supplemented by the six children of his two dead sisters. Moreover, the public gambling tables which were maintaged there for a time by the unsavory M. Marquet, of Ostend celebrity had the result of at-tracting to San Sebastian a class of

The First of the Bourbon rulers of Spain was, however, very liberal in the distribution of this particular grade of nobility, and during the reign of Isabella II. there were at one time as many as 300 marquesses, the num-ber having since been considerably reduced, owing to the severity with which the heavy succession taxes on titles have been enforced during the last twenty years; in fact, since the death of Alfonso XII.

When the Hapsburgs ruled in Spain, the principal titles were dukes, and more especially counts, and prior to Emperor Charles V. of that dynasty, there were no titles but that of count Indeed, the majority of the feudal nobles and possessors of fiefs were known merely as senor, or lord, the most important of them being popu-larly describes as Ricos Hombes, which may by translated as "rich men." It was, from among these Ricos Hombes that Emperor Charles V. selected his twelve grandees, or peers, when he created the grandezza, and every one of them received the title of duke, with the exception of the Marquis of Astorga. The others were the Dukes of Medina Sidonia, of Al-buquerque, Dei Infantado, Alva, Frias, Modina de Rio Secco, Escalona, Benavente, Najera, Arcos, and Medinaceli.

Owing to titles in Spain descending in the female as well as in the male line, these dukedoms are to-day all in the possession of different families to those to whom they were originally granted, the only exception being that of Frias, which is still in the sion of the house of Velasco. in the posses-

Viscounts and barons were also unknown in Spain prior to the Bourbons. Incidentally, I may mention that the real old Castillian neothity is almost wholly extinct. The Guia, which is the official list of the Spanish nobility, shows but four Castillian titles dat-ing as far back as the fifteenth century; two dozen from the sixteenth century; only a few more from the seventeenth century. The fittle of prince is relatively unknown in the Spanish aristocracy. It was granted for life to Godoy, the Prime Minister and favorite of Charles IV., and of his Queen, Marie Louise. His title of Prince of Peace expired with his death. Another was Marshal Espartero, regent of Spain during a portion of the minority of Isabella II, and the supor of the first Carlist insurrec-After having been created Duke pressor of Victory by Isabella, he accepted for life the title of Prince of Vergara, from King Amadeus.

The ring was carried Louisville, Ky. in Spain, but they do not come, strictspeaking, under the category of Spanish princes; and in all the history of the kingdom, the only titles of her brother, Frank England, of Chatprince that have ever been created are the two which I have just mentioned. The scions of the reigning house are known as infants and infantas, not as princes or princesses.

In olden times each holder of a title, or each possessor of the grandezza, even is untitled, was required to place a certain number of mounted men of arms and foot soldiers at the disposal of the crown. In course of time this obligation was compounded for a sum of money, and thus it is that whenever a Spaniard receives a title or inherits it from an ancestor or ancestress, he is obliged to pay heavily for it. A title without the time this obligation was compounded heavily for it. A title without the grandezza costs in fees of this kind $4,000; whereas if it is accompanied.
